

- ...and then?
- Then what?

- What will you do then?
- I will run to the other side

- There is no time.
- Those have been still for days.

- No, I won't go out.
- Don't go out.
I will look you from far.

- Yes, very good...
- And I'll be watching
the bombs falling,
killing you all.

- And you will remain lonely,
in an hostile land.
- You will remain here,
scared and without future

- I don't feel good too,
here inside.
- I told you.
Tonight.

- I'm tired.
You too.
- So you can remain here
thinking of...

Chronicles from the Town

- I'm here writing
"Chronicles from the town
of poised bombs".
- A best seller.

- Our salvation.
- Yes, keeps on joking.
And I will go out...

- That was clear
- I will climb on the highest building and give a push to one of these bombs

- Good, and if it falls,
there is your family below.
- They will die any way.
As we'll do.

- If they will find you out,
they will kill you.
- I'll be already beyond
the border, as an hero.

- But... is it really different beyond the border?
- Sure! It's for this reason that they are bombing us!

- But are they reliable?
They will make you a hero...
- Very reliable... Sure.

- And are women
beautiful?
- Really beautiful.

- And we will be heroes.
- Heroes

- This evening.
- Tonight.
